

ES Directory Spring 2024

Welcome to the spring 2024 issue of the ES Directory. Thank you to everyone who has sent in suggestions for useful products and services and updates for contact details. New entries this issue include: an ES-aware electrician in Lancashire, and a shielded traditional phone with long extension to a mobile to enable receipt of mobile phone calls. Please keep sending suggestions and updates – either email esdirectory@btinternet.com or send to BM Box ES-UK, London WC1N 3XX, marking the envelope ES Directory. Please include postal addresses and telephone numbers for suppliers. Do not just send web links! We do not have the resources to follow these up.

Please note – we are interested in products and services that measurably reduce the amount of EMF exposure, or enable people to avoid places which have high EMF levels – no pendants or herbs please.

People with ES deserve to be treated fairly and with respect. If the directory team become aware via the representatives of relevant charities or support groups of two or more serious complaints from separate individuals about the products, services or standard of customer service provided by a supplier listed here, their entry will be marked with a question mark (?).

This will apply to products and services supplied from 1 January 2022.

Try the Schuko mains adapter.

The sound is converted directly to light and travels up a fibre-optic cable. The product is expensive but there is a possibility of group discounts.

Digital TV

Many people are reporting problems with digital TVs. One way round this might be to use the smallest possible digital decoder and put it in the back of an analogue TV, or if this still causes problems, in the back of a video recorder and stay in another room whilst it is on. You can then watch videos of TV programmes on an analogue TV. Not ideal, but better than nothing.

E. TELEPHONES

Information about ensuring a telephone setup which is as low EMF as possible after the digital switchover is available from ES UK and MCS Aware.

Analogue to digital telephone adapters (ATAs) allow people to use their existing analogue phones over broadband, which will be necessary when the digital switchover has happened. One example is Grandstream HT-812) <https://www.voipfone.co.uk/shop.php?method=view&pid=142>

Beneficial Environments

www.beneficialenvironments.co.uk

Airtube headsets for mobiles, DECT and wired handsets. Video advice on how to use them.

EMF Safety Superstore (details in section A) sell air tube headsets with microphones which can be used at the end of an extension cord (or several joined together) – plus a jack to connect them to any normal phone.

However, many people simply use hands-free phones. Some people have problems with the small LCD displays on some makes of phone. It is worth trying a hands-free phone without a display if you are very sensitive, eg. The BT Big Button 100 phone, and earthing it with wire from one of the metal screws on its base to the earth pin of a socket. The new BT Big Button 200 is really rubbish – try to source the 100.

BT Paragon 650

A landline phone with texting capability – for which you need to plug it into the mains. Be warned – don't stop and think in the middle of texting – the blasted thing goes into powersave mode and loses your message.

Ama-Konsult 4G telephone box

<https://amak.se/#!/fast-telefoni/products/telefonbox-lte-4g> Telephone Sweden: 0910-776905

Creates an analog telephone line that you can connect your old telephone to and use via the mobile network.

The telephone box is placed up to 50 meters from the house and has a loose antenna that can also be changed to a directional antenna if you want to make sure that you don't have any microwaves directed at the home. Click in a SIM card in the telephone box, connect power and phone line to the box and then you can make calls as usual with your phone.

Get a cash card for the telephone box and you will not have a fixed monthly cost for telephony. If you get a SIM card with a landline number, you can keep your old home number with this solution.

In addition, up to 48 hours of built-in battery, so most people can handle power outages without problems. Run it on battery or solar panels and be completely independent of a telephone line or electricity subscription.
